Sex ed teacher admits to seducing student

A former sex education teacher at a Fitchburg charter School admitted Friday to seducing and having sex with an underage student.

The Worcester District Attorney's Office said Rachelle Gendron, 28, was sentenced to two-and-a-half years in prison after pleading guilty to statutory rape and enticement of a child under the age of 16.

Under the terms of her 10-year probation, Gendron must register as a sex offender, stay away from kids under 16 and wear a GPS monitor. GLOBE

Boston most walkable cities: report

Boston is one of the most walkable cities in America, according to a study out of George Washington University.

The study found that real estate development in the Greater Boston area is contributing to the walkable persona, as recent development has been geared more towards urban walking areas.

Areas like this, where virtually everything is within walking distance, called walkUP's, are often high density areas, with public transit close. SHAPLEIGH WEBSTER

Southies, yuppies whoop it up at St. Paddy's parade

Celebration. Is the annual Irish party worth the headaches?

Thousands rocked out along the parade route on Broadway on Sunday.
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

For 115 years, South Boston's St. Patrick's Day Parade has brought smiles and celebration to a neighborhood packed full of Irish pride. But since the annual march draws thousands of rowdy parade goers, locals are left with the traffic nightmare and day-after clean up.

"It's a dirty, dirty mess after parade weekend. I wish the entire neighborhood, not just the route, was cleaned after the parade," said Anna White, 39, of the blog Planet Southie.

For Southie's born-and-raised residents, families still stick with the tradition of venturing outside to support the local festivities. But it's the yuppies that like to cause a ruckus.

"[Yuppies] love hosting house parties or staying in the bars all day and could care less about watching the parade. I personally used to love hosting parties for the parade, but those usually ended up with unwelcome guests, theft, and a call to the plumber," said a 28-year old Southie resident who operates the @SouthieProblems Twitter handle.

The five-year South Bostonian asked that Metro withhold her name because "the Southie youngsters don't really have a liking for this twitter account and would probably love to come beat me up."

With transportation already a major headache for Southie residents, the parade ushers in a whole new set of parking problems.

"If you don't find parking the night before, it is impossible to park on the day of the parade," said @SouthieProblems. "Most of the streets are shut down and you can't make your way from one side of Southie to the other. In some areas, cars double park and take up the whole street, because, no one was going to be able to drive down it anyway. The streets are left a mess with trash and solo cups. I always feel like it looks like the aftermath of a war zone."

White has been let down by the integrity of the parade itself.

"A lot of the content of the parade is ads: radio stations, dating websites, alcohol companies - I wish there were more marching bands and school groups in the actual parade," said White.

But the parade, despite its low points, gives the neighborhood an economic boost.

"For one thing, I think it helps the businesses in Southie. There are lots of people coming in for the weekend of the parade. They go out to eat, they shop, they buy green t-shirts," said Maureen Dahill, 45, editor of CaughtinSouthie.com and a lifelong Southie resident.

White agrees: "I think it helps the bars, restaurants and package stores in the neighborhood," said White.

Irish and LGBT pride collide at St. Patty's parade

For the first time in 20 years, the mayor of Boston marched in South Boston's annual St. Patrick's Day parade thanks to the event's inclusion of groups representing the LGBT community.

OutVets and Boston Pride marched in the two-mile parade after their applications were accepted by The Allied War Veterans Council.

It was a milestone for the local LGBT community, as the council petitioned the Supreme Court in 1995 to uphold its ban on having the groups march. Since then, Boston mayors Tom Menino and Marty Walsh had boycotted the annual event.

A local celebrity. Boston Yeti wants to be the Hub's next mayor

The Boston Yeti relaxes at Walsh's City Hall desk. / WALSH'S OFFICE

This winter, a loveable and random local character known as the Boston Yeti captured the hearts of blizzard beaten Bostonians, and now, as spring descends on the Hub, the mythical creature has a request: "Make me your mayor."

The yeti shot a video with Boston Mayor Marty Walsh announcing the candidacy in a comedic video spoofing the 2015 Snowmageddon. The video was screened Sunday morning at South Boston's annual St. Patrick's Day breakfast.

"I just don't know what to say anymore, I just hope it all stops," a winter-weary Walsh said in the video while standing at press briefing podium. "Can anyone help me?"

The costumed Yeti then approaches the podium. Walsh asks, "Do you want to be mayor?"

The video cuts to a shot of the creature at Walsh's desk with a placard that reads "Boston Yeti Mayor." MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Weekend shootings leave two dead in Hyde Park, Roxbury Investigation. Police probe two fatal incidents.

Two people were gunned down over the weekend in separate shootings, and the suspects are still at large.

One of the victims, a man in his 20s, was killed Sunday during an early morning double shooting in the city's Hyde Park neighborhood, Boston Police said.

Investigators said that victim and another man were shot around 4 a.m. outside a home at 23 Lincoln St.

The surviving victim was taken to a local hospital. That person's condition is unknown. No arrests have been made. That shooting remains under investigation.

The Hyde Park shooting happened about 12 hours after a case of road rage led to the fatal shooting of a man in his 30s on Dudley Street in Roxbury.

The victim in that case was not identified and was pronounced dead at Boston Medical Center.

Bombing Trial. Will terror suspect Tsarnaev testify in his own defense?

When the trial of Boston Marathon bombing suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev resumes in U.S. District Court in Boston on Monday, prosecutors will move to the final hours before the bombing suspect was found hiding in a drydocked boat.

After they conclude their case, it will be up to defense attorneys to determine whether to call Tsarnaev, 21, to testify.

He could do so either before the jury reaches a verdict or during the sentencing phase of the trial, when jurors would determine whether to sentence him to death or life in prison.

Tsarnaev in court on March 5. / JANE FLAVELL COLLINS

"The prosecution is going to try to demonize him, so the defense has to try to humanize him," said James Acker, death penalty specialist and professor at the State University of New York in Albany. "It would be very hard to do that effectively without putting Tsarnaev on the witness stand."

Tsarnaev has pleaded not guilty to all charges related to the deadly 2013 attack, though his defense attorneys admitted early on in the trial that Tsarnaev did indeed drop one of the pressure cooker bombs that exploded at the Boylston Street finish line. Three people were killed in the attack, and 264 others were injured.

Tsarnaev faces the death penalty if convicted.

Heroin deaths on the rise statewide

Drugs. The state's battle against opioid abuse continues.

The state has seen a spike in heroin overdose deaths since the end of last year, with the most significant uptick happening this month, Massachusetts State Police said.

Twenty-two people have died due to the drug since March 1, according to State Police Spokesman David Procopio.

Investigators believe the increase in overdoses, which they began tracking in December, is an unfortunate result of the state's success in keeping addicts away from prescription opioids like oxycodone and morphine.

"There have been spikes periodically over recent years. We've been tracking them every month since December, when we really first noticed the recent spike," said Procopio.

A bad batch of heroin may be to blame.

Police are also looking for any patterns or similarities related to the deaths – such as packaging that might indicate that the drug came from a specific dealer. Procopio said the sample size is too small to know yet whether the overdoses are related.

"We can say with certainty that heroin is readily available and it is inexpensive," said Procopio. "Someone who has an addiction problem would find it much easier to get heroin than say a prescription like oxycodone."

Police warn: heroin kills.

Threats

Winchester school 'hit list' investigated

Winchester police are looking into a threat made against students at a local high school whose names appeared on an alleged "hit list."

The list was created by an unidentified male student, police said, and made reference to a specific list of students that he may wish to harm. Families of the targeted students were contacted, police said, and the investigation is ongoing.

A spokesman for the Winchester Police Department said there did not appear to be any "widespread threat" against the school, faculty, or other students. METRO

She's here. I set my newspaper down, and my wife shoos me out of the back door, leaving me and this young girl to stare at each other from across the garden. I notice I'm still wearing my slippers, and can tell by her grin, Natalie notices too. I sigh, tilt my head and nod toward the garden. We both begin to weed. She's not the best gardener. In fact, Natalie has an uncanny ability to confuse my daffodils with dandelions. But she works hard and, I have to say, she's grown on me. She never lets us pay her, but that hasn't stopped my wife and me from sneaking the occasional twenty dollars into her backpack. As she leaves for the day, backpack in tow, I smile, knowing that at least in a small way, her hard work has been rewarded today.

Five things you need to know

1 Nearly 1 MLN Brazilians protest economic woes

Close to a million demonstrators marched in cities and towns across Brazil Sunday to protest a sluggish economy, rising prices and corruption - and to call for the impeachment of leftist President Dilma Rousseff.

The marches across the continent-sized country come as Brazil struggles to overcome economic and political malaise and pick up the pieces of a boom that crumbled once Rousseff took office in 2011.

Four Americans who may have been exposed to the deadly Ebola virus in Sierra Leone have arrived in the United States and are being observed at the University of Nebraska Medical Center, the hospital said.

The individuals arrived on Saturday and are being housed on the University of Nebraska Medical Center campus in Omaha, where medical personnel will monitor them for 21 days for any Ebola symptoms, hospital spokesman Taylor Wilson said.

3 Ohio River spills banks, flood warning for Cincinnati

Melting snow and rain caused the Ohio River to spill its banks over the weekend, cutting off roads and flooding homes in the southern part of Ohio.

The National Weather Service, which has issued a flood warning for the Cincinnati area, said the river was expected to crest on Sunday at 57.8 feet well above its 52-foot flood stage at least through Thursday.

No deaths or major injuries have been reported.

"There have only been a handful of evacuations," said Jay Carey, branch chief with the Ohio Emergency Management Agency.

The last major flood on the river was in 1997, when it crested at 64.7 feet.

The SecuTABLET, based on Samsung's Galaxy Tab S 10.5 and being presented by BlackBerry unit Secusmart at tech fair CeBIT 2015 in Germany, reflects the Canadian company's stress on secure connections for governments and businesses as it seeks to preserve a niche market after a drubbing in recent years at the hands of emerging smartphone makers such as Apple Inc.

5 Suspect charged in Ferguson in shooting of cops

A 20-year-old man was charged on Sunday with first-degree assault for last week's shooting of two police officers during a protest in the troubled city of Ferguson, Missouri, a crime that fueled a national debate on race and policing.

The suspect, Jeffrey Williams, has admitted to firing the shots and was from the general St. Louis area, St. Louis County Prosecuting Attorney Robert McCulloch, told a news conference.

"It was not certain if he had been targeting police," he added.

The St. Louis suburb has been racked with protests since a white police officer killed unarmed black resident Michael Brown, 18, last summer. The slaying sparked demonstrations around the country and led to a U.S. Justice Department probe.

Williams, an African American who had been on probation for possession of stolen property, was arrested after a massive manhunt. Tips from the public and video evidence helped in the investigation, McCulloch said.

"He has acknowledged his participation in firing the shots," McCulloch said, adding Williams had been at protests in the city. REUTERS

Bond

$300K

The suspect, whose bond was set at $300,000, appears to have used a .40 caliber handgun and was firing from a car, McCulloch said, adding it is possible that he was shooting at someone else.

Celebrities call for Dolce and Gabbana boycott

Designers Domenico Dolce and Stefano Gabbana have some not-too-progressive thoughts about gay parents, and some big names are none too happy about it. "We oppose gay adoptions. The only family is the traditional one. No chemical offsprings and rented uterus: life has a natural flow, there are things that should not be changed," Gabbana declared during an interview with Italy's Panorama magazine, and Dolce had some choice words as well: "You are born to a mother and a father — or at least that's how it should be," he added. "I call children of chemistry 'synthetic children.' Uteri [for] rent, semen chosen from a catalog."

Needless to say, Elton John was not pleased. "How dare you refer to my beautiful children as 'synthetic,'" he posted to Instagram. "Your archaic thinking is out of step with the times, just like your fashions. I shall never wear Dolce and Gabbana ever again." Courtney Love chimed in as well, posting that she wants to burn all her Dolce and Gabbana goods. "I'm just beyond words and emotions," she tweeted.

Heather Mills keeps slamming Paul McCartney

Heather Mills insisted when she appeared on the "Late Late Show" that she didn't want to talk about ex-husband Paul McCartney, but she's got a funny way of showing it.

"This is just someone I fell in love with who to me was a normal guy that happened to write a few cool songs in the '60s and a few in '70s," she says. " I once divorced somebody that I once loved and then I was abused for it." Oh, and by the way, she's way more popular with the kids these days than McCartney, so there: "When I go down the street, it's 'Oh my god, you're a ski-racer' or 'You help the animals.' Half of them don't even know who he is. That's why he's got to do songs with Rihanna and Kanye West, so people remember." Ouch.

Keeping it real

Interview. The star of the new 'Cinderella' likes that it's not a smart-aleck fractured fairy tale.

"Downton Abbey"'s Lily James takes on the title role in Disney's lavish remake of their animated classic "Cinderella." / JONATHAN OLLEY

Lily James didn't think she'd be Cinderella. When she auditioned for Disney's redo of their 1950 animated classic, the onetime Lady Rose MacClare on "Downton Abbey" was expecting one of the supporting roles. Instead, she got Ella, the daughter of a nobleman (Ben Chaplin) who, after his death, winds up at the mercy of his wicked second wife (Cate Blanchett), who renames her Cinderella and makes her life miserable. And James isn't done with period costumes yet: She'll be Elizabeth Bennet in the forthcoming film version of "Pride and Prejudice and Zombies."

You originally went in for one of the wicked stepsisters. It's a bit of a change starting out evil and playing 100 percent lovely.
I didn't think the sisters were evil. I thought they were funny. They're just pathetic. I thought it'd be fun to play them because there's such humor in them. And I liked the idea of playing Cate Blanchett's daughter. The ostensible lead character is a bit quiet, but when I started reading Ella, it felt like there was so much more there than I thought. It sat right. And I decided playing Cate Blanchett's stepdaughter was just as good.

How did you view this incarnation of the character, especially compared to the one in the 1950 version?
I thought she was a strong character, actually — quietly inspiring. In the past in animated films, she's just this princess. She's sweet and talks to animals and sings like an angel, blah blah blah. This version has so much backstory, and she has so much strength. You see her struggle and see her grow into a woman. You see her grief, the loss. She's a deep character. There was a lot to explore. If you have a really evil character, you explore why they're that way. Ella is so good you just had to do as much exploring to figure out why.

That definitely doesn't happen in the original.
She's quite a passive character. You think, "Why doesn't she fight back?" We still wanted to make her a strong character and find reasons why she does what she does.

One more thing

Not too modern

A lot of fairy-tale films take the fractured fairy-tale route, like "Maleficent" retelling "Sleeping Beauty" from the perspective of the sympathetic villain. This is a straightforward retelling of the story.
Those films make the story feel fresh and new, but I like that here the change came from within, rather than spinning the story on its head or adding a gimmick. Not that I think that's a bad thing to do; it's great to mix things up. But I love that this is quite a faithful retelling.

Decisions. Remember to check these things before your final decision.

Try to make one last round of visits before picking a school. / ISTOCK

It's often said that choosing a college is the first adult decision that many teens make in their lives.

It's no surprise, then, that the next few weeks will be particularly stressful ones for college-bound high school seniors as they anxiously wait for their college acceptances to come in and start thinking about where they will ultimately enroll.

"I get students who are really freaked out that they are making the wrong decision," says Sheila Akbar, the education director at Signet Education, a company that advises students throughout the application process. "It's really impossible to see into the future, but if you did your homework, all of the schools you applied to should still be attractive to you."

Akbar recommends doing the following before officially saying yes to a school:

Be confident in your choices

"If you talk to different students, you learn that college is what you make of it," she notes. "You'll find your crew; you'll find friends; you'll find a community."

Talk about your financial aid options

Students and their families should also carefully look at each school's financial aid packages. "Which is the best deal?" asks Akbar. "And remember, those deals aren't set in stone. You can negotiate."

But, Akbar warns, it's important not to go too far. "Don't say [for example], 'I got this much from Georgetown. Hey NYU, how much are you going to give me?' Don't pit schools against each other. That's a bad idea."

Take another tour

"Go back to visit," says Akbar. "Now it's a little more realistic because you can be a student there. Now you can go and think, 'This feels right,' or, 'Something is weird.'"

It's important to also make time to talk to current students to get their thoughts on life on campus. "You can ask honest questions because you know you are already in," she says.

Take notes
Sit in on a class
During your visit, Akbar suggests that you also take the time to sit in on a class. "See how the students are engaged," she says. "You want to see what's comfortable for you."

Finances. A new survey reveals how law students expect to pay for school.

We all know that law school is a big investment, both in terms of the time it takes to earn the degree and the hefty tuition bills that need to be paid to do so. A new survey from Kaplan Test Prep reveals just how the lawyers of tomorrow plan to pay for it all.

The test prep company asked over 900 prospective law students how they plan to finance their JDs. It found that more than a third of students say they plan on funding their degrees entirely by themselves, and over 20 percent more say they expect to pay for at least half of everything on their own.

In order to manage doing so, many of the students say they are expecting to work their way through school while also taking out loans and applying for other types of aid.

A small minority of students (10 percent) say they don't expect to pay for any of it — and expect scholarships and grants as well as their personal savings to cover the bill.

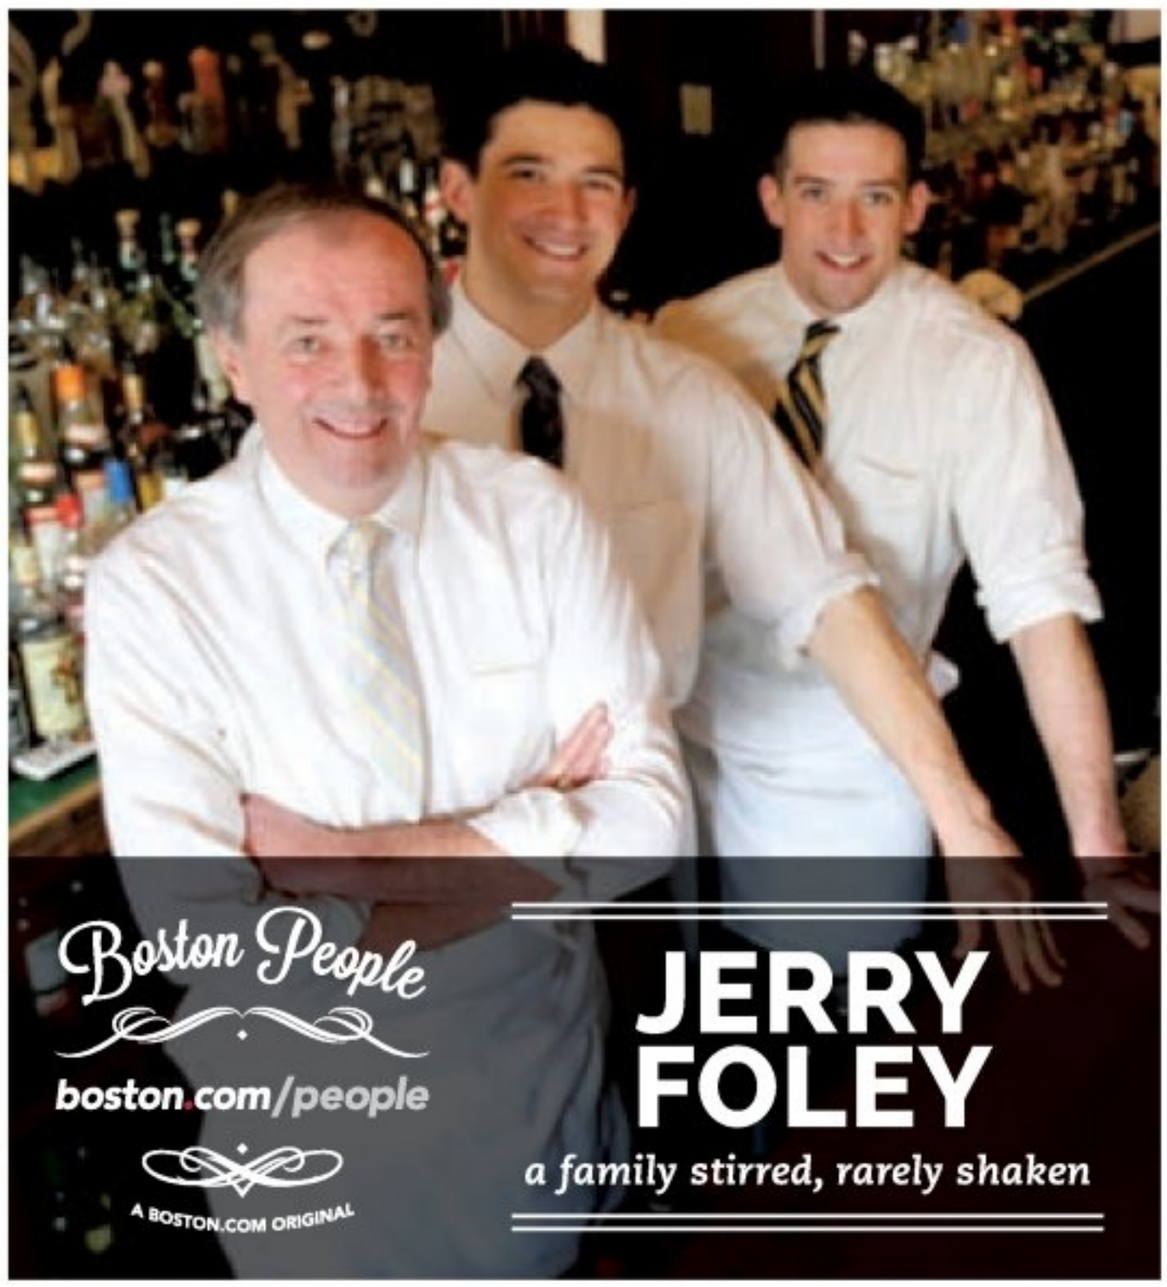
Before you head to law school, think about your funding options. / ISTOCK

"One thing that's notable about our survey is that more than six in 10 respondents plan on securing merit-based aid to pay for law school, which may be wishful thinking," says Kaplan's Jeff Thomas, who works on pre-law programs. "The reality is that even in the present market, law schools offer limited merit-based aid relative to the number of students they accept — it's predominantly based upon outstanding GPAs and LSAT scores." LG

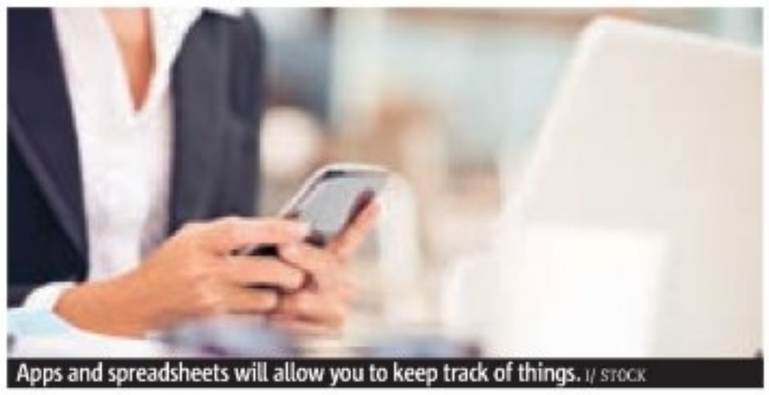
Paying for it all

Thanks, Mom and Dad

But there is some stressful (and perhaps surprising) news for the parents out there who may be reading this. Nearly seven out of 10 of the students spoken to say they expect a parent or a guardian to chip in with expenses (a conversation we hope they had with their families beforehand).



Applications. Tips for an organized job hunt



Apps and spreadsheets will allow you to keep track of things. // STOCK

Job hunting is an anxiety-inducing, exhausting time for most people. It's important to remember that keeping organized is the best way to keep your head on your shoulders. You don't want to forget to follow up with a recruiter or forget to send out an application. Here are a few great strategies to help you get started.

Spreadsheet programs

Spreadsheets are an easy way to keep organized.

Make columns for the following information:

- Date you saw the ad
- Name of company
- Name of available position
- Required materials
- Date application submitted
- Status of application

Consider having different spreadsheets for different kinds of jobs.

Web clipping and read-later programs

Try using a web clipping program like Evernote or a read-later program like Pocket or DotDotDot. Doing so will save you the effort of having to find the ad again.

Once you have job advertisements saved, it will be useful to organize them into different folders. Your system can be organized by job type. Keeping everything together ensures you won't forget something that will help you succeed in finding that dream job.

Job hunting is stressful, but you can make the process more organized if you take the time.

WHEN MARCH MADNESS TAKES OVER THE OFFICE

It's that time of year again. As brackets become the talk of the water cooler and buzz around college hoops takes center court, there are several ways to navigate March Madness at the office, even when you aren't a big basketball fan.

The next few weeks will be pretty distracting to fans and non-fans alike. / ISTOCK

Get schooled

Let's say hoops aren't really your thing (to my sports-averse sisters out there, I'm talking to you). The question is, will it hurt you if you don't show any interest? Unfortunately, yes — it'll automatically exclude you from conversations with colleagues as well as potential casual conversations with clients. It's the whole small-talk factor. It's not any different than staying on top of the season finale of "Empire" even if you don't watch the show, just to be part of pop culture chit-chat.

Fake it till you make it

March Madness is certainly temporary — you'll blink, and it'll be over during the last tip-off for finals on Monday, April 6. Try to skim the headlines so you know who's playing that day or who just had a major upset. Who knows? You may find it somewhat interesting in the process.

Focus on camaraderie

Whether you could care less about the big games, or if you're really into it, March Madness could be the great equalizer. Check that — the great team builder. Why not reserve a conference room so your team can grab a sandwich during lunchtime and watch a game together? If you're all going to be toggling at your desks between Excel and NCAA March Madness Live anyway, you might as well be hanging together instead of pretending to work.

No distractions

Tune it out

It's a funny thing about March Madness — you're either all in or you're all out. So, if you choose to ignore the tournament altogether as well as your colleagues' animated discussions and brackets, simply stay professional and remain focused. If you need to start wearing headphones at your desk to block out chatter about the previous night's big upset, it's OK to do so.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Others may not be too eager to share, making it vital that you observe what everyone does and says. The information will help you make a sound decision.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20
Hard work and valuable connections will help you turn an idea into cash. You should keep your business relationships separate from your private affairs if you want to avoid a mishap.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21
With foresight and planning, an upward trend in your financial picture will develop. Take inventory of your assets and make the necessary adjustments to ensure financial security

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20
Someone will ask you for help with a money problem or estate issue. Relationship difficulties or legal matters will develop if you aren't careful. Don't be afraid to bring in the experts.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22
Keep a close watch over personal property. Don't lend or borrow money or possessions. Make sure that you lay down ground rules with those you live with to avoid confusion.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
Have faith in your abilities. You have what it takes to succeed, so forge ahead. With sound ideas and attention to detail, you will get what you want and more.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Be disciplined when it comes to your goals. Whether you join a gym or work out at home, it's important to get moving and improve your appearance and health.

Your favorite hobby or project can help you alleviate stress. Do your best to keep the peace, and strive for harmony in all aspects of your life.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
You'll be amazed to discover more about your heritage from relatives. Ask questions in order to gain greater insight into something that is currently relevant in your life.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Don't sell yourself short. Taking on extra responsibilities at work will result in a wage increase or give you the confidence to pursue a new position.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Problems with joint bank accounts or excessive spending will cause tension. Credit card debt or loan repayments should be a priority. Set up a strict but realistic budget.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Be prepared to make a move on a promising offer. Refrain from getting involved in other people's private affairs. The complications will damage your reputation. EUGENIA LAST

Letters to the editor

President not doing Ferguson any favors

As a retired police officer, I sometimes wonder why any young person out there would ever want to go into law enforcement when thanks to apparent race-baiting by the mainstream media and those in positions of authority like President Obama and outgoing Attorney General Eric Holder, police officers have become target practice for those upset by the decision from the feds not to charge the former officer in Ferguson, Missouri with a crime. It was a justifiable shoot. However, when Holder goes on to "indict' the Ferguson Police Department of widespread and assumed racist-like practices and using sweeping assumptions not based on facts and talking about "disparate impacts" that decision only added fuel to the fire still burning in Ferguson. The shootings of two police officers outside the Ferguson Police Headquarters on March 11 seems a direct result of the harsh tone of those in the Justice Department feeding racial tensions rather than trying to simmer down that environment. The suspects may have pulled the trigger but the ugly incident had a direct correlation to the rhetoric of Eric Holder's Justice Department and the political verbiage of President Obama during his recent visit to Selma, Alabama to commemorate the 50th anniversary of March to Montgomery across the Edmund Pettus Bridge on March 7, 1965, when the peaceful marchers were brutally attacked by police officers trying to break up the march.

When you sow the seeds of unrest, you can get unanticipated consequences like this latest act of violence against police. The time is now to bring people together not move them apart.

I am glad that the president and attorney general both immediately spoke out loud and clear on the shooting and condemned it. America needs to bind up its wounds. We need to live as one nation and the only colors that should matter are red, white and blue.

NCAA tourney

St. John's player suspended

St. John's is back in the NCAA tournament but it's not all smiles in New York as one of the best players on this year's Red Storm roster, Chris Obekpa, was suspended by the team for two weeks for a violation of team rules. Head coach Steve Lavin did not disclose the violation but told ESPN, "All of the young men associated with our program are held to the standards consistent with the aims and mission of our University." St. John's plays San Diego State Friday.

Bracket breakdown

NCAA. Undefeated Kentucky will look to make history in the 2015 field of 68.

Kentucky landed the top overall seed in the tournament while Villanova, Duke and Wisconsin also nabbed the top overall spots in their regions.

The West Region looks to be the toughest and the South and Midwest Regions look to be the most controversial as UCLA and Texas slipped into the field.

MATT BURKE and EVAN MACY

EAST REGION

Villanova is the top seed in the East after a fantastic regular season that only included two losses. They also won their first Big East title in 20 years. The Wildcats will face another Pennsylvania team, Lafayette in Pittsburgh in the first round.

A No. 5-seed sleeper, Northern Iowa could make a deep run if they can handle No. 4 seeded Louisville from the loaded ACC.

Another ACC contender awaits at the bottom of the Eastern region in Virginia (No. 2), but watch out, Belmont has pulled off epic upsets in the past and is no stranger to playing as a very low seed.

Metro's pick: Villanova

Villanova grabbed the No. 1 seed in the East. / GETTY IMAGES

MIDWEST REGION

Kentucky, no shocker, is the bona fide favorite in the region, carrying an SEC title and unbeaten record as well as two of the NBA's top seven prospects to the tournament with them. A very good No. 4 seed will be hoping to thwart the perfect Wildcats in the Maryland Terrapins. Also keep a eye on No. 2 seeded Kansas, which lost the Big 12 title game to Iowa State but has the ability to keep Kentucky on its heals should they face off.

Metro's pick: Kentucky

KENTUCKY EASILY ENTERS THE TOURNAMENT AS THE FAVORITE. GETTY IMAGES

SOUTH REGION

For the 13th time, the Duke Blue Devils are a No. 1 seed and Jahlil Okafor and Co. will square off against the winner of North Florida and Robert Morris in the second round.

Assuming the Blue Devils don't become the first No. 1 seed to fall to a 16, Duke will have a tough third round matchup against either St. John's or San Diego State.

Without question, the most buzz in the South is centered around No. 11 UCLA, which controversially snuck into the field of 68 despite having not beaten many top-notch teams this season. The Bruins will face Larry Brown's SMU squad on Thursday.

Metro pick: Georgetown

UCLA is the tournament's heel. GETTY IMAGES

Boston pride

Northeastern and Harvard will both be playing this Thursday (time to be determined).

- The Huskies will face the ACC tournament champion Fighting Irish of Notre Dame, the 3-seed in the Midwest Region. NU went 23-11 this season and won the Colonial tourney.
- Harvard will also face off against an ACC power as they'll meet No. 4 North Carolina. The Crimson went 22-7 this season and won the Ivy League. It's their fourth straight tourney appearance.

WEST REGION

How will the West be won? The hard way.

The West is the roughest bracket as it has a No. 2 Arizona squad that could have easily been a No. 1 and a sharp-shooting Baylor team that quietly put together of a fabulous season. Oh, and that little unknown school that wears Tar Heel blue? It's a 4-seed in this region.

North Carolina will face No. 13 Harvard on Thursday as former Blue Devil Tommy Amaker looks to upend Roy Williams' group.

No. 1 seed Wisconsin could certainly make it through to Indianapolis, but it will have plenty of battle scars to show off in three weeks if that's so.

Metro's pick: Baylor

Baylor is a trendy pick out West. GETTY IMAGES

NBA. Red-hot Celtics back home to host Philly

After beating the Pacers in Indiana Saturday night, the Celtics extended their win streak to four games, officially making them the hottest team in the Eastern Conference.

The C's (29-36) will look for their fifth straight "W" Monday (7:30 p.m., CSNNE) at TD Garden against the lowly 76ers (15-51).

The Celtics are a half game behind Charlotte for the No 8 seed in the Eastern Conference.

The C's have won their last three games despite the absence of Isaiah Thomas, who has been out with back and elbow issues. It was reported late last week that Thomas could return for Monday's game against Philly. MATT BURKE

Bruins are at their best when doubted

NHL. It took long enough, but it appears the B's have found their 2014-15 groove.

The recent turnaround orchestrated by the Bruins in the last three weeks has been nothing short of remarkable. They have gone from looking like a team that was hardly a sure thing to make the playoffs to now the hottest team in the league after their 2-0 win at Pittsburgh this past weekend.

Boston (36-22-10) has won five straight games, which ties its best streak of the season. It is also the longest current win streak in the league.

The B's are 8-1-1 in their last 10, which is tied with the Rangers for the best mark, and they have tied Washington for seventh-place in the Eastern Conference with 82 points (and a game in hand).

Goaltender Tuukka Rask (29-16-10, 2.26 goals against average, .924 save percentage) has been brilliant during this run. His shutout against the Penguins was his third of the season and 26th as a Bruin - which tied Gerry Cheevers for fifth in franchise history.

"It was a battle, it was a grind but I thought we stuck with it and played hard," said center Patrice Bergeron on Saturday's win over Pittsburgh. "Tuukka made some huge saves for us."

One of the important aspects about their strong play lately is that the B's have proven that they can beat anyone in the East, outside of Montreal. Over a week ago against Philly, Brad Marchand basically saved the season with a late tying goal in regulation, then an overtime winner that more or less ended the Flyers' playoff hopes. The next day they beat Detroit, 5-3, last Tuesday they won 3-1 in Ottawa (which had been on fire), then they continued to own Tampa Bay with a shootout win last Thursday.

By the numbers

Bruins goaltender Tuukka Rask has a 2.26 goals against average in 2014-15, with a .924 save percentage and a 29-16-10 record.

With all the playoff experience on the roster, the Bruins should have plenty of confidence against pretty much everyone they'll see in the East. The Rangers have wrestled away the top spot from Montreal, while Boston has made its move on Washington and Detroit (only five points ahead).

"The funny part is that we didn't even realize that we were getting close to the teams above us, because we were focusing on the teams catching up to us," noted left wing Milan Lucic.

There is no let up for the Bruins for the rest of the month with eight more games in March. They host the Sabres on St. Patrick's Day (7:30, NBCSN) then head out for a three-game road trip. It is a grueling stretch but if the B's have proven anything in this particular era, it's that they play their best hockey when it's needed most.
